

ARIZONA CATTLE HAVEN'T GOT THE "BIG JAW"

Dr. A. A. Harmon of the United States bureau of animal industry, with headquarters at Albuquerque, N. M., who has been in Arizona for the past ten days investigating a cattle disease reported as "big jaw," is now in the Congress section, continuing with Dr. Norton, territorial veterinarian, and will visit the Date Creek country, where the peculiar disease has made an appearance, differing in some respects from that found in the Thompson valley and Kirkland districts.

Dr. Harmon states that he has reached the conclusion, from his investigation, that the disease is not "big jaw," but appears to be a peculiar affection of the throat, and only found in animals grazing in certain districts and localities. He has forwarded diseased parts of the animals to Washington for laboratory tests as well as a partial report of his investigations here, the contents of which he refused to make public.

Since the new grass has made an appearance on the ranges the affected animals have shown much improvement, many becoming entirely well, which adds to the contention of some of the stockmen that the disease was the result of an irritation of the throat from browsing on brush, the stickers of which irritated greatly.
